

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

The main rain band will swing away, leaving a showery set-up, but with little wind to move them on, some of the showers could produce over 20 mm of rain in just 2 or 3 hours, with a few places perhaps seeing 40 mm through the rest of Saturday.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:05 on Sat, 07th Sep 2013 until 23:59 on Sat, 07th Sep 2013

Periods of heavy rain will clear Northern Ireland, only to be replaced by some slow-moving heavy and thundery showers across the Province and also parts of southwest Scotland through the rest of Saturday.

The public should be aware that there is a risk of localised disruption due to surface water flooding.
